Q: What is the exact difference between "set membership and set inclusion" I have seen following two expressions: "set membership and set inclusion" while reading a textbook. I am confused on the difference between them. I am learning the foundations of graph theory from here. The book is available here.

A: A set S is a subset of another set T , written $S \subset T$, if all the elements of S are also elements of T . $S \subset T$ does not tell anything about the cardinalities of S and T .

A: Set inclusion is such that $x \in T \implies x \in S$ (or conversely that $x \in S$

$\mathbb{T} \rightarrow \{x \in S\}$ but that does not tell us how many elements there are in the set S . Set membership is a statement about the cardinality of a set. $x \in S \rightarrow |S| \geq |\{x\}|$ $x \in S \rightarrow |S|$
